The University of Helsinki has concluded the terminations concerning its entire staff. The University terminated the employment contracts of 371 employees, in other words 4.4% of its 8,242 employees. Of the terminated employees, 48 were members of the teaching and research staff and 323 were members of non-academic staff.

The University's staff will continue to shrink until the end of 2017 also due to retirements and resignations. More than 200 positions will be left unfilled after their holders retire. Of this number, 60 are teaching and research positions and 170 are non-academic positions. Moreover, the number of fixed-term staff will continue to gradually decrease.

All in all, the number of University staff is estimated to shrink by 1,000 employees by the end of 2017.
